Music Notes: Take Down These Walls was composed by British Columbia composer Brian Tate for the 2017 Unitarian Universalist Musicians Network conference, held in August at the UU Congregation of Arlington, VA. Several members of the Cedar Lane choir were present to rehearse and sing it under the composer's direction. Mr. Tate was inspired to create a musical commentary against the prevailing lack of tolerance and hate: "Take down these walls that divide us. Take down these walls so deep inside us." Pop star Andra Day's song Rise Up gained instant popularity as soon as it was released on her album "Cheers to the Fall" in 2015. Featured in advertisements and sung by Day at the White House and the Democratic National Convention, the song acts as an enabler for the oppressed, the embattled, and even those who suffer from illness and depression. When honored by Billboard Women in Music as the 2016 "Powerhouse" she was asked about her song and replied "You can be the change that you want to see, if you allow yourself to be."

Special thanks to soloist, Jenny Lynn Moyer, and all who have come out to sing with the Summer Choir. Want to sing? Join us in the Sanctuary at 9:15 am next Sunday, July 8, and let your voice be heard.
